HOME-COMING WEEK AT THE FORKS OF THE MUSKINGUM

COSHOCOTON TO CELEBRATE CENTENNIAL JUNE 25

Aside From Military Features the State Will Have Agricultural Exhibit Eclipsing the State Fair.

"The Forks of the Muskingum" was the great rallying point of the old Northwest Territory long before the colonies of the new world shook off the shackles of England. It was at the "Forks" that the Indian tribes congregated each year for the annual hunt; it was there the Delawares held their pow-wows; it was there that the white man stopped on his westward march; it was the first pin prick on the map of the Ohio country, long before there were settlements made by the invading whites.

And it was there at the forks of the Muskingum that the Delaware town of Goshachunk, the long-tent of Chief White-Eyes, was established, that later became the white settlement that has since been enclined in orthography into "Coshocot." It was one hundred years April 1, that the county of Coshocotone became recognized by the sovereign state of Ohio, being lopped off of Muskingum county; and that one hundredth birthday anniversary is to be celebrated this month at Coshocot with a seven day merry-making. The week beginning Sunday, June 25, has been set aside for the greatest birthday party Ohio has ever seen. It is to be more than a festival. It will begin with the dignity of a union Thanksgiving service of all the churches in the county to be held in the court-house square—thanksgiving for a hundred fruitful years—and will continue throughout the week with military and civic pageant, graphic pictures of the growth of a century, and a grand home-coming of former sons and daughters.

Not only has every citizen and former citizen of Coshocotone county put his shoulder to the wheel but the State of Ohio is evidencing her interest in one of her eldest daughters by going to from $15,000 to $18,000 expense to help make one worth remembering for the next 100 years. The state equally will encamp at Coshocot that week, coming through on horseback and arriving at Coshocot the afternoon of Saturday, June 24. SENSATION
At Mansfield Was Badly Warped
By The Police

Highway Robbery Story Bent
Out Of Shape

A Big Crap Game Was Held Under A Tree

(Mansfield News)
Somebody has said: "What a tangled web we weave, when first we practice to deceive!"

This just about fits the case of Stephen Brecht, the young man who reported Saturday night that he had been assaulted and robbed while on his way home at 6 o'clock after drawing his pay amounting to $23.50 at the rubber works.

When the case of assault and highway robbery on Brecht, who is 18 years of age, was reported into the police station Saturday night police were sent out in squads to look for the perpetrators of the dastardly outrage until all reserves had been put on the job. Chief Feeney and Capt. McClure also joined the other detectives and carefully inspected the clinders on the banks of the stream where Brecht claimed he had been thrown down after the assault and robbery. Incidentally it might be said that the officers didn't take much stock in the story but they let it go as Brecht had it fixed and it was so published. In the meantime the officers were looking into the matter and last night they got some new angles to work on which promised developments of a different nature.

Young Brecht was summoned to the police station this morning and the officers informed him that they were of the opinion that he had lost his money in a crap game. In fact they told him they knew all about it. Capt. McClure says that Brecht acknowledged that he took part in a crap game under a tree in the northeast section of the city Saturday afternoon and dropped some money. Capt. McClure and Officer Gray say that according to their information there were four or five other men in the game and after Brecht had lost his money a dispute arose and it resulted in a free for all fight and it was in this scrap that Brecht was roughly used and finally chucked down the bank into the creek.

The officers also say that some of the young fellows who took part in the crap game have become alarmed as the result of the publication of the story about the alleged assault and robbery of young Mr. Brecht and have left their jobs at the rubber works. The information is to the effect that several have actually left town until the excitement blows over. Chief Feeney is out of the city and the other day officers are pretty busy but the matter is being worked up gradually and there are likely to be more developments before long. The officers say that they have information to the effect that the assault and robbery story was fixed up to prevent Brecht from getting roughly handled by his father when he reached home without the money. It is pretty mean of the police to cut down a nice, large assault and robbery story like that was to the level of a mere crap game and that under a big tree. The case seems to be on a par with the boy kidnapping story from Detroit a few days ago. Some arrests will be made in connection with the Brecht sensation.

Occasionally we meet a young man who is willing to go through anything for a girl he loves—including her fortune.

REST IS NECESSARY IN CURE OF CONSUMPTION

That no consumptive can hope for a cure of his disease without following the most rigid routine with regard to rest is the conclusion of four interesting articles in the Journal of Outdoor Life for June, by Professor Frederic S. Lee of Columbia University, New York, Drs. Lawrason Brown and F. H. Heise of the Adirondack Cottage Sanatorium, Trudeau, N. Y., Dr. Joseph H. Pratt of Boston, and Will M. Ross of Stevens Point, Wis.

Professor Lee, writing on the subject "The Physiology of Exercise and Rest," shows by experiments on dissected frogs the way in which exercise tires the muscles and, in fact, all the organs of the body. He says:

"There is no known antidote to fatigue, unless it be rest, with all that rest implies. Sleep allows the reparative process of rest to be performed most quickly and completely. A moderate degree of fatigue, or even a considerable degree when not too often incurred, is not detrimental to a healthy body and is even to be advised. The healthy body is provided with great recuperative powers, and does not rapidly succumb to even excessive demands on its energy. But it should be allowed the proper condition for recuperation, and that condition is adequate rest. There is danger when the fatigue of one day's labor is not eliminated before the next day's work is begun. The effects may then be cumulative, the tissues may be in a continued state of depression, and the end may be disastrous."

Drs. Brown and Heise in an article on "Properly Regulated Rest and Exercise in Pulmonary Tuberculosis," hold that the action of the poisonous germs of the disease on the body is very similar to that of over-exercise. The poisonous irritation caused by the germs gives the organs and tissues of the body a double load to carry. They emphasize the importance of rest in the treatment of tuberculosis, but also insist that properly regulated exercise is very necessary. They state their conclusions thus:

"Exercise when properly regulated and systematically graded is an important factor in the treatment of pulmonary tuberculosis. Through it the patient is in many cases returned to home and family with lessened chances of future relapse. At the same time part of his earning capacity is restored and he is consequently financially less dependent upon others, relieving him of much worry, expense and hardship."

Dr. Pratt, who was founder of the first Church Tuberculosis Class in the United States in the Emmanuel Church in Boston, claims that in the treatment of tuberculosis absolute rest, often in bed, must be extended over a period of months, before the consumptive should take any exercise. He says, "Prolonged rest in bed out of doors yields better results than any other method of treating pulmonary tuberculosis. Patients will have a better appetite and take more food without discomfort and gain weight and strength faster than patients with active disease who are allowed to exercise. Complications are much less frequent. When used in the incipient
